ARTS LESSON STRUCTURE: Attention, Review, Teach, and Support

Attention: How will you prepare the students for the lesson?

Teacher

Students will write, review, and edit journal articles with me. Students complete PDN (please do now) assignments which are daily language review and editing lessons on a daily basis.

Artist

We'll quickly review what we did in Session 1 and talk about ARMS.

Review: What will you review? What is the academic vocabulary for the lesson?

Teacher

Academic language prior to this lesson will be revise, edit, word choice, punctuation, capitalization, commas, quotation marks, and details.

Artist

I'll review the academic vocabulary for this lesson: revision, editing, punctuation, typographical errors.

Teach: What will you do to teach the content?

Teacher

Teacher modeling with writing prompts will be completed prior to the lesson. Students will revise and edit their own work after teacher models instruction. You Tube videos and connected assignments will be completed as well.

Artist

Using a PPT that will include text, video, and images, I'll talk about how revising and editing are integral parts of the writing process. The lesson will be a mix of whole-group discussion and individual time to revise and edit.

Since this is session 2, we'll dive right into group work and then move to individual work.

Support: What will you assign the students to complete and how will you support their learning?

Teacher

Students will revise and edit an information writing piece which correlates with their reading story.

Artist

We'll continue revising the poem that we started in Session 1. Once we complete that, the students will revise their I AM poems using ARMS. As they do, I'll be available on camera and to answer questions and give encouragement.

Closure: What will we do to reinforce learning and close the lesson for today?

I'll ask them to name one thing that they enjoyed in this session and explain that we'll focus on editing in our next session.
